Have Wand, Will Travel

My friend's son is the perfect little wizard. I mean, he has the works—little round wire-rimmed glasses, a cape, even a wand (sound like someone we all know?). I can just see him now. Whirling through the house, a blur of cape and imagination, attempting to change the cat into a dog. I'm sure when the doors are closed for naptime, he jumps out of bed, dons a star funnel hat, and tries to turn his bookcase into a portal to another world (probably somewhere that doesn't require naptimes).

So entrenched in the world of wizards is he that no one is safe from his wonder-working powers. In fact, my little girl came home from a play date at his house and added to her favorites dance moves something called "The Sorcerer." Wave your arms out in front of you and shout "kazaam!" Congratulations. You just did "The Sorcerer." I guess that's one way to get a boy to dance with you—name a dance after him.

For our wizard-in-training friend, Estella has this great kid's T-shirt from Munster Kids. It's out-of-this-world soft in 100% cotton, and its roomy fit is great for moving effortlessly while casting spells. Add a bike into the picture and you have the perfect outfit for every wizard-on-the-go.

To add to the enchanting feel of this kid's tee, it's part of Munster's t4t series. That means that Munster donates one garment to kids in Vietnamese orphanages for every one of its garments sold in the U.S. and abroad. Now that's some magic.

Shirin Cottonball Organic Baby and Girl's T-shirt

Is it just me or does a little baby girl defy all things in nature when it comes to how soft she is? Her soft tiny hands gently placed in yours, her touchable baby cheeks (no pinching, please), and her soft little voice (well, it's not always soft, but it has that potential). Take a little girl's hair, for instance. The science experiment in static electricity that my daughter's locks become at the bottom of a playground slide is a testament to its fluffiness. The perfect ingredient to add to the girly recipe of sugar, spice and everything soft is the Shirin Cottonball Organic tee.

What better way to complement your her soft side than with one of the softest, most luxurious cotton in the world? Not only is the Shirin Cottonball Organic t-shirt made from organic supima, one of the dreamiest cottons on the planet, this top boasts a charming cotton ball design—just in case you needed even more evidence that your child is indeed a softie. And its sweet cream, pink and light brown hues are certainly soft on the eyes—no loud primary colors for this little lady.

When the weather gets warmer and you want something soft and lovely for your soft and lovely, you'll be happy to find this sophisticated, original t-shirt in her wardrobe. And it's available for ages from 6 months to 6 years, so she can hold onto her softer side for years to come. Now if only we can work on that voice.

Keeping Things Sweet & Simple

I had the privilege of sleeping late the other morning. I know. You hate me, dont you? Well, dont just yet. I paid for it. I was awakened by the sound of my daughter and husband arguing over clothes.

She didnt want to wear the flowered shirt with the flowered pants and the flowered socks. Too many flowers, she screamed. But that's all we have, my husband retorted smartly.

I came out of the bedroom and immediately saw the problem. The child looked like a garden. I mean, there were flowers on every stitch of clothing on the poor child. What she needed was at least one solid piece in her outfit to stop the patterned madness. What she needed was a simple white shirt.

As any parent knows, with either girls or boys, things are never simple with kids. For some reason this translates to clothing choices. It's amazing how hard it is to find a simple white shirt for kids. Everything has a giraffe on it or hearts or some crazy pattern (flowers for girls, camouflage for boys).

That's why I was so happy to discover this cotton baby tunic top from French children's clothing designer Bon Bon. Crisp and clean from the Spring 2010 collection, it's simply white. Perfect to tone things down a bit. Kids are loud enough. Why do their clothes always have to be?

Long-sleeve for chilly little arms and 100% soft cotton, this gem understands that sometimes you need to keep things simple. Great alone or under a sweater for light layering. And given the bon bon name, you might say its a sweet find.

Sigikid Wihihih! Horse Stuffed Animal

It could be your crooked smile. How tall or short you are. The way your hair has that funny flip to it in the front. There will always be something about you that someone might not consider attractive. Dare I say, something they might even call ugly. And you know what? That's OK.

Not everybody is beautiful. Not everyone is perfect. This is one of the main lessons I try to teach my daughter every day. A great stuffed friend who is always there to remember this is Wihihih! Horse Stuffed Animal. In life, it's important to look past someone's imperfections and get to what they're really all about—their heart. This is who they truly are, and it's not just about what they look like. Wihihih! certainly is neither beautiful nor perfect (some might even say he's ugly), but he's quite lovable despite all of his faults and follies.

Known for their weird stuffed animals, Sigikid's wonderfully happy horse helps us understand and act on the idea that it's the imperfections that we have, the funny ways about us, that make each of us unique and truly "perfect." Standing at just over a foot with mangy fur and bumpy bones, Wihihih! is a perfect companion to help a child look beyond someone's outside and love their inside. His big goofy tooth-filled grin welcomes your boy or girl and let's them know that, even though there are certainly prettier horses out there in the world, he's as happy as can be.
